Notice in N.Y. World, Sunday 28th March 1880.

A private cable despatch received by Mr. John Carey of this city, announces the death yesterday ~~of this~~ morning of his father, Mr. John Carey Sen.r, at his residence in Blackheath, London, in the eighty-third year of his age. Mr. Carey, from 1830, when he first came to this city from England to successfully engage in mercantile pursuits, until 1852, when he returned to London, was one of our best-known metropolitan residents.

He was the father of the Rev. Arthur Carey, an eloquent young Episcopal Divine, whose adhesion to Puseyism while he was Rector of the church at the corner of Thompson & Prince Streets in 1852 excited great popular interest & discussion - Mr Carey was a member of an old family of that name in Gloucestershire. Many of his old friends in this city will remember his fondness for natural history, and what a leading part he took in establishing & for along time aiding to maintain in this city the Lyceum of Natural History, for which a building was erected some forty years ago on Broadway near Prince Street. His studies in natural history led to his publishing several monopaphs of his researches into specialties of that science. —
